THE ENTREPRENEUR

Are Entrepreneurs Made or Born.

The discussions on this subject have been ongoing for years and will be for many more. All business people are not necessarily Entrepreneurs, although some do like the TAG. There are many great business people well educated running large organisations that would not consider themselves to be Entrepreneurs.

Many trains leave the Career Station heading for the business world, the above people get on one train.

On another train is someone who is self employed, maybe see a better quality of life just working on their own, would never employ another - because of the problems they envisage in doing so. In a way these people carve out a niche and take control of their own lives. They are no drain on any agency so they are to be admired.

Those Entering into a family business board another train.

The Entrepreneur train is a little different

Quote Where others see obstacles the Entrepreneur sees Opportunity
 If this quote is to hold good then an argument of not having access to bank loans cannot hold good. The Entrepreneur would overcome this or find another way. He would not see this as an obstacle. It is this very area that makes the Entrepreneur. He will always see the situation differently. Maybe he would not go to a bank! Maybe he would sell a percentage with an option to buy back.

The main point is they see the world a little different. Others think of them as just been lucky. He was in the right place at the right time, he got it cheap yet it was on sale for all. Everyone wants to buy what he bought, but only after he bought it. (when he turned on the light)

Speaking with my accountant one day he showed some envy at my end of year results, he asked "how do you guys do it I am long thinking of doing something for myself. I am really tired of seeing very average guys that are clients here making lots of money". I asked him do you consider yourself to have more business acumen than the people you speak of, most definitely was his reply. How is it then that you do not make the same money as them and they do not envy you.

He still works at the practice
